Historically, public libraries often support their communities during crises with essential services, including access to the internet, assistance with e-government forms, and even shelter.

Preparing for all hazards means planning and training based on an analysis of a variety of risks, including natural and human caused.

This is the All Ready Reference Guide to many of the free resources available through your local, state, and Federal government. The Guide is hyperlinked to take you to those resources.

Use these resources throughout the emergency management cycle to prepare your library, and your community, to be All Ready.

SOURCES

- http://mblc.state.ma.us/costepma/
- https://www.fema.gov

CREATED BY

Sarah Carnes for the Disaster Information Management Research Center at the National Library of Medicine and the National Network of Libraries of Medicine, New England Region

---

For more information and access to the resources listed above, use a QR Code reader to visit the portal website. Alternatively, visit the site directly at:

http://www.sarahcarnesinformationscience.com/allreadyreferenceportal.html